

Course name: English Language

No. of ECTS: 2

Aim:

The aim of the subject is to prepare students to work in international environment through raising their English language competences. This will be carried out through getting the students acquainted with professional English vocabulary connected with their field of study as well as through improving their knowledge and skills connected with the use of grammar constructions. Attention will also be paid to pronunciation practice in RP standard and fulfilling CEFR B2 language level standards.

Course content:

- Course introduction. Defining course goals, objectives and programme.
- Issues in human resources management.
- Aspects in employment.
- Cultural differences in business.
- Negotiating techniques
- Quality and its importance.
- Leadership and directorship. Approaches to organizational management.
- Innovation and its business implications.
- Business meetings and presentations
- Issues in phonetics – short and long /o/ - difference in pronunciation and pronunciation practice.
- Issues in phonetics – short and long /a/ - difference in pronunciation and pronunciation practice.

Skills:

A student can obtain information concerning their field of study from literature, data bases and other sources in English; can draw conclusions and give reasoning to their opinions, can communicate by means of various techniques in both professional and non-professional environment, can prepare a research paper on issues connected with the field of study, can prepare a presentation and make a speech in English, concerning specific issues from the field of study, possesses language competence on B2 level according to CEFR with specific knowledge of vocabulary from his/her field of study.

Form of teaching:

Presentations, panel discussions, stimulated discussions, reading, listening and watching, role-plays; pair work, group work